Boutique design practice Nina Moeller Design will showcase one of its latest products at interiors trade show Index Dubai this month.

Curve Bench is one of London-based designer Nina Moeller's newest pieces, designed with flexibility, space and community in mind.

"It's designed to be integrated into the interior of any building and is perfect for public indoor spaces such as reception areas, hotel lobbies, galleries, libraries, and shopping malls," the company said ahead of unveiling Curve Bench at Index Dubai.

The trade show takes place between 17-19 September at the Dubai World Trade Centre and is geared towards interior design and hospitality.

Nina Moeller Design has teamed up with the UK's tech-driven design Recursive, which has worked across the Middle East on projects for Dubai Mall and Sun, Sea Sand and Sports.

"On display, visitors will see the new Metal Curve Bench placed against Creation Baumann Fabrics and Benjamin Raymond wall finishes, that will show how to make normal surfaces such as walls and fabrics become surfaces for a more interactive and engaging user experience," the design company added.
